Says event organizer John Marlatt, owner of the Moonshine Café, "Our goal is to promote the talented musicians living within our community. Some of our performers are seasoned veterans, while others are just emerging onto the local music scene. Many have started out on our open stage night at the Moonshine. Some have even moved on to play opening sets for touring artists such as Madison Violet, Nathan Rogers, Michael Pickett and Steve Payne. We encourage Oakville to come out and show their support."

Musicians range in age from 14 to over 50 and represent an array of styles from blues and country to pop and folk. "They have been coached and encouraged to the best of our abilities," says Marlatt, “and this Showcase will move them forward as performers.” Talent scouts will also be in attendance.

Located at 2261 Dundas West, Hugh’s Room has hosted the finest in Canadian and International folk/roots artists, since opening in April, 2001. For more details, visit www.hughsroom.com or call the Moonshine Café at 905-844-2655. Advance tickets can be purchased at both locations.
